FOREST FIRE THREATENED

EAST BETHEL HOMES

A forest fire which quickly assumed alarming proportions started near the old logging camps on the "Egypt lot," near the home of Ben Tyler on the road leading from Locke Mills to East Bethel, about 2:30 last Friday afternoon. This lot of land and the camps belong to Frank Brooks of South Bethel and had not been used for a long time. When the men first reached the scene the fire had gone to the tree tops and outside help was called.

Soon a hundred men or more were at work and for a time their efforts seemed without effect, but changes in the wind did much to help them and by 11 o'clock the fire was under control. Men kept a close watch however until morning. A steady rain which began about midnight extinguished the fire, which otherwise might have given more trouble on Saturday, as the woods and fields were very dry.

The damage was confined mostly to cut over land and some young growth, about a hundred acres in all being burned over. At one time the roof of Mr. Tyler's barn was ablaze but this was soon extinguished.

THURSTON APPLIES BUSINESS METHODS IN CAMPAIGN FOR NOMINATION FOR GOVERNOR

The characteristic traits of a successful business man are shown by Paul C. Thurston of Bethel, dove manufacturer and banker, in his detailed proposals for reduction of the State's huge $30,000,000 budget by more than $5,000,000 annually and for the curbing of waste and extravagance in the State Highway department.

Thurston, who is waging a vigorous campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor, explained at a recent dinner meeting of Kennebec County party workers at Augusta the exact method which he would use in slashing the State budget, if nominated and elected Governor.

He told his hearers—among whom were four other candidates for the gubernatorial nomination and the party candidate of two years ago, now a candidate for Congress—that first he would move back to the 1930 expenditures which were $5,000,000 less than the expenditures of 1931. Then, on the basis of 1930, he would allot to each department head four per cent less than that year's appropriation and compel them to keep within their allotment. That, he pointed out, would lop off another million and bring the State to within a million dollars of its 1929 expenditure which was a little more than $23,000,000. He emphasized the sanity of such a proposal by pointing out that many individuals and sound business concerns generally were spending less than they did in 1929.

Thurston is equally specific in his recommendations for drastic changes in the policies of the State highway department, which, as he says, "expends more than one-half of the governmental income of the State of Maine."

The high lights of his highway program which has received the endorsement of Grange and other groups before which he has spoken are these: Conduct of the State Highway department by a single commissioner appointed by and answerable to the Governor.

A more even distribution throughout the State of money spent by the Highway Commission.

Spending less money for administrative purposes of the highway department and more for the construction and maintenance of highways.

Closing building of bond roads to unimproved places.

Another feature of Thurston's campaign in which he has put in practice a principle learned from business activities is that of devoting himself to the sale of his own line of political goods rather than attacking the methods or the wares of opponents. He makes no criticism of other candidates for Governor, Democratic or Republican, and daily urges those who are working in his behalf to confine their activities to constructive salesmanship.

A candidate with a definite, positive program who does not attempt to push afoot or carry water on both shoulders, a candidate who avoids attacks upon any other candidate for Governor in something of a novelty in Maine politics.

Politicians in both parties already are beginning to confess that Thurston's campaign methods have them "stumped," while the ordinary garden variety of voter is watching the Bethel man with much interest.

These making the trip were Scoutmaster Herbert B. Bean, Charles Anderson, Donald Brown, Edwin Brown, Stanley Brown, Merwin Buck, Lloyd Chaplin, Edgar Cuddehe, Chandler Feltz, Henry Hastings, Frank Littlehale, Richard Marshall, O'Neil Robertson, Gardner Smith, Dale Thurston, Howard Thurston, Emory Vail, Erlend Wentzel, Robert Brown, and Laurence Bartlett.

GOULD LOSES TO NORWAY, 14-9

In a game featured by hard hitting Norway high defeated Gould Academy 14-9. Two home runs, 6 triples, and two doubles were included in the 23 hits garnered by the combined hitting of the two teams. Roberts of Gould was most successful at the bat with two triples and two singles in five trips up. Quimby allowed 13 hits which coupled with nine errors allowed the winners 14 runs. Hamlin hit a home run for the losers in the third inning.

Eleven hits were made off LaFrance and Hall but their team-mates played better ball in the pinches. Howe, Norway shortstop, was the batting sensation of the day with a double and four singles in six times at bat. Yeaton, third baseman, got four hits including a triple and a double. Coffin, center fielder, also batted sensationally, getting four hits including a home run and a triple. Norway also felled well, erring only four times.

GOULD LOSES PITCHERS' BATTLE

Browne Hits Runners to Two Hits—Two Walks and Three Errors Costly

In an air tight pitchers' battle Runners High maintained its league leadership by defeating Gould 4-1. The game was marred by severe cold and a sand storm. Gould Academy played its best game of the season behind the excellent pitching of Browne, who struck out eight men and allowed only two hits. In the fifth inning, with two men out Browne walked two men. E. Stewart then stepped up to get Runners' second hit of the game and bring in both men. In the sixth inning left allowed a ball to get away from him after two were out and with a man on third, who brought in Runners' third run. In the eighth inning, Roberts pulled a bad play, throwing the ball over second base with a man on third. E. Stewart and Viter were the only men to get hits for Runners.

A beautiful running catch by Quimby was the best play of the day. All in all the attack with two singles. The two hits off Addition were well executed. No two hits came in the same inning.

SECRET OF BRIAND'S LOVE IS REVEALED

Premier Lived a Bachelor After Romance Failed.

Paris.—The secret of why Aristide Briand, eleven times premier of France, a lover of children, remained a confirmed bachelor until his death a few days ago has been solved by the story of an unhappy love affair now being told for the first time.

The attitude of the great orator and statesman toward marriage dates to the early days when he was a struggling law student.

In his native Nantes was a Breton maiden who received the homage of all the young men of the best families, but this girl, Jeanne Kermadec, by name, was ambitious and had declared that she would only listen to the wooing of a man with a brilliant future.

She refused to entertain the impetuous Briand of humble origin, and cast in her lot with a young man of his own age, one of his friends, a member of a well-known family and a brilliant star of local debating societies for whom a great future was predicted.

Twenty years later the man of brilliant but unsteady character, after serving a sentence for fraud, and he and his ambitious wife were reduced to the direst straits, living in a miserable attic in the most squalid section of Paris.

At the time Aristide Briand, who had by then devoted himself to the law and journalism, was just coming into his own as a politician, and his daughter, Jeanne, was a brilliant pianist and a member of the French Academy, but Briand, who had been reduced to the direst straits, living in a miserable attic in the most squalid section of Paris.

When the law had been in the grave a year Briand offered marriage to Jeanne, but she had refused him in the first instance, she again refused him after, saying that she had no right to burden him with a woman with a past who was only a shadow of her former self and was representative of a wasted life.

In any case, she said, her own death could not be far off, and in fact she died about two years afterwards.

She was buried in an unmarked grave in the little cemetery of Clichy, where the remains of Briand now rest.

Each year, on the anniversary of the woman's death, Briand would lay flowers on the tomb, and would even the most important political engagements and would be forced to leave with no other thought than a brief return.

Now, however, both are at rest, but far from each other.

Cat's Powerful Jaws

The strength, agility and docility of the wild cat are proverbial and illustrated in the following story: A deer hunter's wife had lost several hens, a wild cat was suspected, and traps were set in several likely spots. One morning a large specimen was found in one, caught by a hind leg. Instinctively, the keeper stretched forward his claws, which the enraged cat seized with its paws and teeth. On withdrawal, the gun showed, as it still does distinctly, the impression of the cat's teeth in the hollow, solid part between the barrel. The skin, which was in splendid fur, measured 45 inches from top to tip.

FOOD OF QUALITY FOR BREEDING

Only Way to Get Best and Healthy Chick

"Poultry has suffered almost other farm crops, but due to in feed prices in proportion to prices being received for eggs, cause of the mid winter price reduction to stay at level. man have been much encouraged ahead with their work," says Dearstyne, head of the poultry department at North Carolina state. "However, some poultrymen tempted to increase their profit by decreasing the feeding substituting certain feeds which give as good results. One of vegetable protein feeds for poultry feeds. Soy bean meal is a good feed if used in limited quantities, but they should not replace the animal protein, when production is heavy and are being used for hatching. Any radical change from the methods of feeding at this time is to be collected in the hat of the eggs or the livability of chicks. Mr. Dearstyne says. The line hens should be fed so that will produce only the highest of eggs.

Mr. Dearstyne insists that feed, plenty of sunlight, and a mineral supply and milk in some should be fed the birds to get eggs for producing healthy chicks. The breeding birds are to be the long laying season and maintain weight, they must be fed a ration. It is particularly unwise to depend on grain feeds alone.

Chickens a Life Saver

Says Ohio Poultryman

R. W. Swetzer, poultryman, the Ohio Farmer how he has reduced feed costs in his flock. "I have had to make money we had to reduce feed costs," says Swetzer. He the cost of grinding grains for a wasted expense. He feeds choice ration with corn, wheat, oats, meat scraps and fore the birds at all times. Ge supplied by cabbage and ground liver oil is fed in the grain. Mr. Swetzer raises all his buys only concentrates. "Last showed Swetzer, we received a pound for our grain by mail through our hens." Dairy co. his main line until disease he and he had to sell his stock chickens at this time proved a saver," he said.

Causes of Paralysis

Paralysis is occasionally chickens that are heavily fed rapidly. It is also seen when overwatering and poor ventilation have plenty of sour green feed and add one part of fluid extract of muscivora to each drinking water.

There is a form of paralysis called mostly young birds, but there is no treatment of any value usually fatal. In cases of it is advisable to get a new put them in new buildings land, changing the old floor ground or buildings does not out the disease.—Michigan Farmer

Incubator Points

Level the incubator with level and place bits of wood any less than seems short. only helps to keep an even egg chambers but prevents them that occurs when the floor even and one of the incubator does not rest firmly.

A cellar is the best location for an incubator as it is free from the air with to rather. When the machines are open an upstairs room the entire must be careful to avoid heavy walking, hanging doors, leaving them open and the air around the machine.

Need Cod Liver

Poultry kept around city smoke clouds do not get sunshine in winter time, and liver oil is necessary for the E. L. Dakin, of the Ohio Society, says after feeding oil to his flocks. Two years ago he flocks without cod liver oil and that one year had the next year he fed cod liver to every one, and that year they open without oil had the best production of all.—Ohio Farmer

"Poultry has suffered along with other farm crops, but due to the drop in feed prices in proportion to the prices being received for eggs, and because of the mild winter permitting production to stay at level, poultrymen have been much encouraged to go ahead with their work," says Roy S. Dearstyne, head of the poultry department at North Carolina state college. "However, some poultrymen have attempted to increase their margin of profit by decreasing the feeding or substituting certain feeds which do not give as good results. One of the main substitutions being practiced is to use vegetable protein feeds for animal protein feeds. Soy bean meal and peanut meal are good if used in limited quantities, but they should not entirely displace the animal protein, especially when production is heavy and the eggs are being used for hatching."

Any sudden change from the usual methods of feeding at this time is likely to be reflected in the hatchability of the eggs or the livability of the chicks, Mr. Dearstyne says. The breeding hens should be fed so that they will produce only the highest quality of eggs.

Mr. Dearstyne insists that green feed, plenty of sunlight, an adequate mineral supply and milk in some form, should be fed the birds to get the best eggs for producing healthy chicks. If the breeding birds are to be through a long laying season and maintain body weight, they must be fed a balanced ration. It is particularly unwise to depend on grain feeds alone without much.

Chickens a Life Saver,
Says Ohio Poultryman
R. W. Switzer, poultryman, has told the Ohio Farmer how he managed to reduce feed costs in his flocks. "To make money we had to press down on feed costs," says Switzer. He believes the cost of grinding grains for poultry is a wasted expense. He feeds a free choice ration with corn, wheat, germinal oats, meat scraps and milk before the birds at all times. Greens are supplied by cabbage and apples and cod liver oil is fed in the grain.

Mr. Switzer raises all his grain and buys only concentrates. "Last year," showed Switzer, "we received 6 cents a pound for our grain by marketing it through our hens." Dairy cows were his main line until disease broke out and he had to sell his stock. "Our chickens at this time proved a life saver," he said.

Causes of Paralysis

Paralysis is occasionally seen in chickens that are heavily fed and grow rapidly. It is also seen where there is overcrowding and poor ventilation. Let them have plenty of sour milk and green feed and add one teaspoonful of fish extract or cod liver oil to each pint of drinking water.

There is a form of paralysis that attacks mostly young birds, for which there is no treatment of any value and is usually fatal. In cases of this kind, it is advisable to get a new flock and put them in new buildings on clean land. Changing the old flock to new ground or buildings does not stamp out the disease.—Michigan Farmer.

Incubator Pointers

Level the incubator with a spirit level and place bits of wood under any leg that seems short. This not only helps to keep an even heat in the egg chambers but prevents the vibration that occurs when the floor is uneven and one of the incubator legs does not rest firmly.

A cellar is the best location for the incubator as it is free from vibration and the air will be rather moist. When the machines are operated in an upstairs room the entire family must be careful to avoid running, heavy walking, hanging doors or closets leaving them open and chilling the air around the machine.

Need Cod Liver Oil

Poultry kept around cities where smoke abounds do not get sufficient sunshine in winter time, and hence cod liver oil is necessary for them. Prof. E. L. Drake, of the Ohio State university, says after testing out several flocks. Two years ago he fed all flocks without cod liver oil except one, and that one pen laid the most eggs. Next year he fed cod liver to all flocks except one, and that year this single pen without oil had the lowest production of all.—Ohio Farmer.

FARM BUREAU NEWS

A new arrangement is being made to provide dairymen in the county with facilities for milk testing in which samples will be sent by mail to the tester instead of the tester going to the dairyman. Advantages are many, chief among them being that the cost is much less and there is no limit to the number of herds that can be tested. Furthermore, any herd in the county, no matter how remote, will be just as conveniently tested as one which may be next door to the tester's laboratory. Twenty-two dairymen have already requested this service in the short time the plan has been announced. These dairymen have 222 cows or an average of 10 cows per herd. There are several small herds of six cows or less. Prices are correspondingly less on small herds. For further information write your county agent, D. H. Ridley at South Paris.

For two years Carroll R. King, a Jersey breeder in South Paris, has been trying out pasture fertilization. Tests made on a small acreage show the farmer what treatments give best response and he gets the information at a small cost. On Mr. King's pasture, 500 pounds of super-phosphate per acre applied last spring, not only helped last year but has caused much earlier and greener growth this spring.

Evidence of the seriousness with which orchard men regard the fruit fly or railroad worm is apparent in the way they are removing old neglected trees from their premises. A recent visit to the farm of E. B. Curtis, Paris Hill, revealed that he has removed 218 apple trees this spring. Of these, 200 were natural fruit trees in the pasture, nine were Snow apples and nine Baldwins.

The farmer who can successfully master three or more major farm enterprises and carry them successfully in his own farm "hook-up" seems to be doing the least worrying at present. Guy Curtis, Norway, is certainly a poultryman, yet six cows identify him as a dairyman, and 200 young bearing McIntosh apple trees enroll him as an orchardist. His seven section permanent brooder house is 24 feet deep and has recently been remodeled with a 4 foot walk running lengthwise of the building through the center of the pens, using this as a brooder. Heat is derived from hot water pipes running under the walk. A thousand chicks were brooded last year and has been increased to 1800 this spring. His apple trees are producing at a profitable age and fruit kept clean with a power duster. Each year he plants sweet corn as a cash crop. Alfalfa will be seeded next spring he states.

The orchard red mite is no longer an uncommon pest in Oxford County at least. Orchardists in South Paris, Norway, North Paris, Buckfield and Sumner have been advised to watch for the tell-tale signs this summer and early fall, namely, an early yellowing of the leaves which gradually takes on a bronze color.

L. J. Trask, an orchardist at North Paris, is continuing his planting of young trees from his own nursery, setting 100 trees of the Courtland variety this spring. Last year 200 trees were set. A remodeled and insulated storage cellar kept his fruit in good condition last fall.

Oil (Soft or Wall Paper Paste)

Three cups flour, 1 cup salt, sifted together. Wet with cold water until a smooth paste is formed, then pour on boiling water until it makes about four quarts. Let it come to a boil, stirring constantly. Cool and use. If it seems too thick, thin with cold water. This can be kept for several days in a cool place.

NEW ENGLAND MILK PRODUCTION CONTINUES AT RECORD LOW LEVEL

Average daily milk production per cow for all cows, as reported by many New England dairymen on May 1, 1932, increased 3.8% during April compared with an average increase for this period of 5.5%. However, average daily milk production per cow on May 1, 1932 was 5.2% lower than on May 1, 1931 and 8.0% lower than the five year average for May 1. The average for New England on May 1, 1932 at 16.01 pounds per cow was at the lowest level for that date since the beginning of available records in 1924. This compares with 15.43 pounds on April 1, 1932, 16.38 pounds reported for May 1, 1931 and 17.40 pounds the five year average 1926-1930.

The proportion of dry cows to all cows in New England decreased about 8.0% during April. Increases in the percentage of dry cows in Maine, Vermont and Rhode Island were practically offset by decreases in New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut. On May 1, 1932 the proportion was 22.6% in Maine, in New Hampshire 20%, in Vermont 16.1%, in Massachusetts 16%, in Rhode Island 22.9%, and in Connecticut 19.5%. For New England a percentage of 18.4% on May 1, 1932 compares with 21.1% on April 1, 1932, 18.3% on May 1, 1931 and 17.4% the five year average for May.

The April price of 3.75¢ fluid milk, 10th zone basis, as estimated by the Statistician of the New England Milk Producers' Association, averaged $1.50 per hundred pounds, the same as reported for last month. This compares with $1.97 per hundred pounds for April 1931 and $3.15 per hundred pounds the five year average. Surplus milk during April averaged $5.7 per hundred pounds, eleven cents less than for March and compares with $1.15 per hundred pounds for April 1931 and $1.76 per hundred pounds the five year average for April. On the Boston market 92 score butter averaged 20.3 cents per pound for the first ten days in May 1932. This compares with 21 cents per pound for the corresponding period in April 1932, 24.5 cents reported in May 1931, and a five year average for May of 42.5 cents per pound.

With the exception of gluten feed which advanced 5¢ cents per ton during April, the prices of most feeds at Boston were down from $75 to $2.75 per ton during this period. Prices of white hominy feed remained unchanged.

Little things like the padding on the ironing board may affect your success in pressing and also affect the appearance of your dress. A smooth surface on your ironing board is very important. Use several thicknesses of smooth, seamless, old blankets or cotton flannel. Cover tightly and smoothly with stout cotton material without seams or starch.

THRIFT SAYS IT

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(By the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

(T.W.N. Service)

TWO young men were discussing life in general and marriage in particular, as young men will. "A man could not marry," said Giles Harrington, "until he is drawing at least seventy-five a week, can show a bank balance of four figures, and is prepared to finance his own house."

"In my opinion," retorted Dick, who was the son of old Doc Winters, a man could not marry until he was old enough to be a grandfather, and had a goodly estate. "I don't see how a man can afford to marry until he is old enough to be a grandfather, and has a goodly estate."

"And I maintain," insisted the other, "that unless conditions that I outlined are met, she will not remain the right girl but prove the truth of that old saying about love flying out of the window when poverty comes in at the door."

Now it is possible that, at the time of this conversation, both young men had already become interested in Martha Endicott. Martha was a very pretty girl who had various suitors, but when Giles Harrington and Dick Winters entered the lists, people made a habit of saying that Martha would naturally choose one of the two.

However, it was not very long after the above discussion on life in general and marriage in particular, that both young men saw fit to call upon Martha. Not together, nor on the same day, yet near enough so that possibly the discussion had something to do with it.

Martha was seen out driving one day with Giles, the next at the theater with Dick. On Sundays, both Dick and Giles would drop in at the Endicott home.

But they were rivals, and each man knew it. In between calls on Martha, each man was hustling for all he was worth, trying to make himself worth more to the other.

SUCCESSFUL GIRLS' PLAY DAY HELD AT SOUTH PARIS HIGH SCHOOL LAST SATURDAY

Miss Gertrude Knowles, director of physical education for girls, accompanied the Gould team of ten girls to the Oxford County Girls' Play Day at South Paris on Saturday. The rainy weather made it necessary to have a modified program indoors but the affair was very successful. Miss Morse, of the South Paris High School faculty, served as director, assisted by teachers from the other schools. Eight schools took part in the activities: Rumford, Canton, Mexico, Norway, South Paris, Dixfield, Oxford and Gould Academy. The program consisted of the following: volleyball, potato race, baseball relay, three-legged race and stunts.

The Gould team consisted of Captain Pauline Brown, Mary Tibbets, Shirley Cole, Barbara Heath, Nellie Chisholm, Norma Rolfe, Vera Berry, Margaret Hamlin, Betty Soule, and Vera Thurston. Betty Soule 1935 was the Gould member of the winning green team.

HOMESPUN SENSE ETHICS OF BANKING

By MELVIN A. TRAYLOR President First National Bank, Chicago

We must not take unfair advantage of our competitors. It is entirely proper for us by legitimate means to obtain all the business that we can, but in doing so we ought to do nothing that will injure our competitors and that will destroy the confidence which the banks must repose in each other and which the community at large must repose in the banks as a whole if we are going to thrive and remember always we cannot thrive separately. We shall either all thrive together or all suffer disaster.

Sentiment in Banking

No sentiment in banking? Will you recall just one day's activity at your desk—what were the problems you considered? Did they apply solely to the cold-blooded conduct of the affairs of your bank, weighing, measuring, analyzing, valuing securities, extending credit, driving the best bargains possible, having in mind only the material return from your day's labor? Certainly such is not the case. I recall many days—happy days, too—in my experience in a very small country bank, in which I am sure not one-tenth of my time was given to the real consideration of the financial returns to my institution.

Open Markets

I believe in an open market for the actual purchase and sale both of commodities and securities. But so long as the actual rate for credit in this country swings up and down according to the demand for funds for speculative purposes, little influenced by central or other banking policy, then something is wrong somewhere. Moreover, if business is influenced—as is almost universally charged—by the state of public mind; and if the state of public mind is influenced, as in recent years it most certainly has been, to run the scale from extreme optimism to extreme pessimism according to the characters on a ticker tape, then something is wrong with the public mind, or the conduct of the forces back of the tape. Those responsible must provide the answer.

Physical Geography

The schoolmaster had been giving his class a lesson in physical geography, and had explained that the world is made up of land and water. Then, in order to see if they had been giving attention, he asked:

"Now boys, can you tell me what it is land and water make?"

For some time there was silence, but presently a little boy put up his hand and when asked to give the answer, he replied: "Mud, Sir."

Foreign Objects

Children put things in their mouths by habit, because that is the way they learn the size, shape and roughness of an object, and by imitation, because what mother and dad do they believe to be correct. If mother places coins or pins in her mouth and if dad chews on a piece of wood or a toothpick, they are getting a bad example, an article in Hygeia Magazine by Dr. Morvin C. Myerson suggests.

Properly Cautious

When Sarah Josepha Hale went to Boston in 1828 and started the first "ladies' magazine" in this country, she sponsored a movement to raise funds for the Bunker Hill monument. "Some editors are against me," she wrote naively, "but the ladies' society is being organized, though we would by no means recommend any lady to join without the consent of her immediate protector."—Minneapolis Journal.

SOUTH BETHEL

Ben Tyler from East Bethel has been plowing gardens in the neighborhood.

Mr. and Mrs. Merton Young from North Fryeburg were in town Sunday.

Mrs. Martha Noyes and son and Mr. Noyes from West Paris were callers at the home of her brother, Frank Brooks, and family a short time Monday afternoon.

Charles and Alice Mason have the measles.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Harthorne from Norway visited relatives in town Sunday.

Mrs. Lester Swan and baby Kenneth from Locke Mills visited. Mrs. Frank Brooks Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Edward Chase from Locke Mills came up one evening last week and carried Mrs. Linwood Newell and daughter Margaret and Edna Robinson to Bryant Pond.

The school is rather small because of scarlet fever and measles.

The men in this vicinity went to East Bethel Friday afternoon to help fight the fire there on the mountain, which caused a great deal of damage to the property of Ben Tyler and Frank Brooks. There was one crowd which stayed all night. Probably watchmen would have been needed Saturday if it had not been rainy. In spite of the heavy rain there were some large trees still burning Sunday.

Frank Brooks is doing some plowing for Henry Hall.

That Is What I Would Do

By FANNIE HURST

(By the Author of "The New Newspaper Syndicate")

WHEN Thomas Arden brought home the notorious Minnie Dupont as bride to the square stone house he had occupied as a bachelor, he must have done so with his eyes fully open to possible consequences.

The consequences were of course nobody called. Within three weeks after the marriage, the area of silence and isolation around the Ardens was like a vast park bordering them more privacy than they knew what to do with.

Minnie was not accepted. The circles in which Tom had moved as a bachelor might have vanished in this air so far as his further participation in them was concerned. It was a bitter truth that they had actually severed the prosperous town in which Tom prospered simply turned a cold shoulder upon the advent of Minnie to Tom's life, and resented what was regarded as outrage.

Minnie had what is known as an "easy" reputation.

Eligible Tom Arden's marriage to her came as the proverbial clap of thunder. The community gasped, assigned, turned its back. The playful, good-humored, good-natured, absolutely dauntless qualities which had first attracted Tom to Minnie, now stood their test. Minnie saw to that, one way or another, Tom's home was a source of constant delight to him. Her laughter rang in it, her soft handiwork transformed it, her skillful cookery made its table an epicurean's delight, and her bold effulgent beauty thrived in it.

If, in the long watches of the day, she descended upon Minnie, whose spirits loved to soar, long fits of irremediable depression, Tom was not to know it. The woman whose life had been filled with activities and gayeties from one day to the other accepted this strange new lot without reference to it, without whimper, without complaint.

Sometimes blatant things happened that brought color to her face and caused her avowals of secret tears. The Ravensels, who lived next door, a family of social prestige and no wealth, had ever since the arrival of the bride consistently kept the blinds of all the windows which faced the Arden house drawn to their limits.

Before his marriage it had been Tom's habit to shout across the lawn to the Ravensels from his own side windows. Minnie knew that, because time and time again Tom used to describe to her his habit of waving good-night to the four-year-old Doty Ravensel, who was his pet.

Not once, since their arrival from the honeymoon, had Minnie so much as clapped eyes upon Doty. The Ravensels, along with the rest of the community, turned a cold shoulder, but in the case of the next-door neighbors the shoulder was most obvious.

The skill with which Minnie dominated the difficult situation was extraordinary. There came a time when Tom began to make references with anger to their behavior. Not on his own account. As a matter of fact, Tom was happier than he had ever dreamed he could be. But his heart hurt angrily for Minnie. "Your little finger is worth more than the whole gang of them," was his frequent way of summing up the situation. "I'll take my business away from every man in this town whose wife snubs me."

"I wouldn't do that, dear. What does it matter? Now, this is what I would do: I'd go my way and not harbor resentment. Life is short and hard enough at best. Forgive."

"What could you do about a woman like that! Couldn't you sour her. Couldn't you get her to admit a heart-burn or a snub."

"Next time I see Lucy Ravensel on the street, I'm going to walk up to her and tell her where she gets off."

"I wouldn't do that. This is what I would do. I'd ignore it and see if in time she doesn't sort of come around to realization of how petty it all is."

Bless her. Didn't need a brick house to fall on Tom, as he put it to himself, to make him understand that inside she was hurting and aching and bluer than her beautiful eyes. Minnie, who had been born and reared in a notorious environment, was accustomed to attention.

Minnie cried, sometimes a great deal. Alone. But then there was always the redeeming miracle of Tom. The miracle of the man who had suddenly brought into her life quiet, new, and lasting significance.

One cheerfully endured loneliness for that, and secret heartache and wounded pride and tacerating humiliation.

Children were what she missed most. In her own city, there had always been youngsters about. Spoiled, undisciplined darlings, who floored naturally around her. The precocious and beautiful children of the theater. The gay, innocent children of women who were gay and far from innocent.

Their absence in her life made the house seem still in a way that was terrifying. The voice of a youngster would have helped. When, as time went on, it seemed discouragingly obvious that Minnie was to have none of her own, there was talk of adopting a child. Tom was all for it, eager to introduce into the home of this woman he adored any possible streak of light and sweetness. Strangely, after much consideration, it was Minnie who decided against it. Tom understood. One did not draw a child into the shadow of a cloud.

It was ironic beyond the telling and something that was to take years for him to be able to bear up under that Minnie, returning from a solitary walk into town, should have been killed outright by an automobile, as she darted in front of it to snatch back little Doty Ravensel who had leaped in front of it after a puppy.

Like a candle snuffed, the lonely, gulf personality of Minnie went out, as it were, in a flash, dashing Tom into darkness; dashing life into darkness.

What a funeral! For years it was one of the talked of occasions of the town. Six carriages laden with flowers followed Minnie's hearse. Crowds stood upon the lawn and along the sidewalks as the solitary bitter figure of Tom Arden followed the white hearse to its grave.

In a bitterness which he was later to regret, he gave orders that no one, save himself and two servants, should follow her to her last resting place.

The crowd stood by respectfully, and a little cowed. The house next door, had every blind lowered, and every flower in its luxurious gardens plucked to make up a blanket for Minnie's grave.

It was a grim, tragic picture of a solitary man following a woman who in death seemed no more solitary than she had been in life.

In a way, the subsequent behavior of Lucy Ravensel was pathetic. It might actually be said that she scratched for admission into that silent stone house, like a dog biding his time. Apparently awed neither by the bitter black anger of Tom, nor his forbidding servants, she called daily, the little Doty at her side, offerings of food and flowers in her hands.

For six months that door remained steadily closed to her. One day she encountered Tom on his steps. She was a narrow, nervous-lipped woman and the weeks following Minnie's death had played havoc with her.

"Tom," she said, "aren't you going to let us alone—aren't you going to give us the chance to make her memory a monument in this town? If you can deny me, Tom, Doty asks you—Doty asks you to let her help you."

Standing there looking down into the clear eyes of the child whom Minnie had snatched from premature death, it was as if what Minnie would have said came flooding to his ears and his consciousness.

"Take little Doty into your heart—that is what I would do, Tom—"

That is what Tom did.

Buffalo Herds in East in Eighteenth Century

The American bison or buffalo was at one time nearly as abundant east of the Mississippi as on the western plains.

Remains of bison have been found in southern Michigan, more adapted to their grazing habits than the pine-covered areas of the north, and in Wisconsin. In the latter state a pair of these animals, killed by Sioux in 1832, are believed to have been the last of the species east of the great river.

In the early history of New York, bison made so many trails to the salt springs about Onondaga that settlers used them for roads. The city of Buffalo was named after them, likewise several towns and a mountain in Pennsylvania. The last Pennsylvania bison was killed in 1790 near Lewisburg.

Early in the Eighteenth century, according to writings of Jesuits and explorers, bison were plentiful along the Sandusky river and in the territory south of Lake Erie. In 1718 they were reported as abundant near Defiance, Ohio. In the latter part of the century, however, when permanent settlements were being made, they had dwindled to a handful.

A few of these animals were found in Indiana as late as 1810. The Indiana geological survey, as quoted by Edwin Lincoln Moseley in "Our Wild Animals," tells of a migration from the prairies of the West across the state to salt licks and blue grass meadows of Kentucky. Buffalo were seen near Vincennes in 1808.

Had the bison been more intelligent and better able to cope with the settlers, they might have survived the Middle West. They were very slow in comprehending danger and often witnessed the slaughter of their companions with wonder and curiosity. While they were extinct this side of the Mississippi, herds 25 miles across were being hunted in the West.—Detroit News.

Extolled Virtues of Tea

In the British museum there is an old advertisement which recited the merits of tea and then delicately suggested that it could be bought at Garway's coffee house for from 15 to 50 shillings a pound. Mr. Garway told his prospective customers that there was nothing like tea for the health. "It maketh the body active and lusty, helpeth the headache, removeth obstructions from the spleen. It is good against stone and gravel. It taketh away difficulty of breathing." He goes on to say that tea is good against "apoplexy distillations," which means that the cup that cheers but not inebriates will clear up bleary eyes. Moreover, says Mr. Garway, "It cleanseth and purgeth a hot liver."

SOUTH WOODSTOCK

Miss Margaret Peabody brings us the following items which she states as authoritative in regard to her mother, Mrs. Saddle Bryant of South Woodstock, whose funeral was held at the Union Church on May 16. Mrs. Bryant was born in Benton, Maine, Jan. 15, 1874, being 58 years of age at the time of her death, the daughter of David and Mary (Flagg) Wright. Mrs. Bryant had been cared for by her daughter for the last 17 weeks of her illness. Mrs. Bryant in girlhood became the wife of Newell L. Peabody of Greenwood, and to them were born three children; the oldest, Laforest, dying in infancy, Ella Spaulding who passed away in 1930, and Margaret Peabody. Mr. Peabody died, leaving the wife and mother, who later became the wife of Joseph Timothy Bryant of South Woodstock, still living. Three children, two of whom died in infancy, were born to them. The youngest, Joseph T. Bryant, Jr., is now living with his half-sister, Margaret Peabody. Also left to mourn their loss is a sister, Rosabelle Gould of Melrose, Mass., and a brother, Alton Wright of Monmouth, four granddaughters and five grandsons.

The barn built by Frank Sweetser of Bryant Pond for Fred Andrews on the Aaron Irish place is practically done. Harry Stevens of North Woodstock and Gayden Davis of South Woodstock finished work there May 21.

A small party from here, including Mr. and Mrs. Gayden Davis, little Edith Menola, and George W. Davis, called on Guyson G. Davis at Farmington Sunday.

Robert Whitman of South Paris was a Sunday afternoon caller on his cousin, Mrs. Eliza A. Davis.

A model sample of woodcraft was recently shown at the launching of the motorboat, "The Alura," on Lake Christopher at Bryant Pond. The honor of the same we claim for South Woodstock, as the entire making of the trim little craft was done unaided by its owner, Stanley Andrews, of this place, who certainly deserves much credit for the workmanship displayed.

The Willing Workers were most highly entertained at the Briggs home by Mrs. Ellen Briggs on Wednesday afternoon, May 11. A large number were present.

A. M. Andrews, senior member of the firm of I. W. Andrews & Son, spent several days recently at Camp Judy at Shagg Pond, where he entertained a number of friends for the week end.

GREENWOOD CENTER

H. O. Wood, the Watkins dealer, was through this place recently. William Cross and a crew of men are repairing the town road.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tracy of Norway have moved into their camp for the summer.

Mrs. R. L. Martin had one hundred chickens come from Schwegler's Hatchery, Buffalo, N. Y.

Mary Martin spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Martin.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Whitman and family, and Miss Lula Swan of Norway spent the week end at their camp.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Farr and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Tripp of West Poland were callers at R. L. Martin's Saturday evening.

Donald Bellisle who is working at Poland and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Waterhouse of West Paris were visitors at R. L. Martin's Sunday.

To get their money's worth is the reason most families make a budget. A budget will also help to decide how to spend the same amount in the future to get more satisfaction.

TWO-MINUTE SERMON

by REV. GEORGE HENRY

IS YOUR LABEL A LABEL?

What label do you wear? Does it really indicate what is in your mind and heart? Are you the kind of a man you profess to be? If your label reads "Lawyer," are you an honest, earnest, trustworthy one? If your label reads "Physician," are you just what people are led reasonably to expect by that label? If your label reads "Christian," does it really indicate a pure heart, high ideals, elevating thoughts, kindly deeds? If not, then why wear the label? Tear it off if the contents are poisonous and paste on the skull and cross-bones. It is better that men should shun you than that they should seek you to their hurt. The poison that is labeled such is not a menace, for even poisons have their use and part in the scheme of life? Would you be willing to wear a label, for all men to see, that would exactly describe the kind of a man you are? No? Then be the kind of a man you ought to be.
